Barracks Destroyed of Town in Which Germans are Believed to be in Charge—Turkey's Apology for the Attack on Russia in the Black Sea Not Satisfactory—The Porte Agrees to Withdraw Her Fleet, But Refuses to Dismiss the German Officers Who Command the Ships.

(By International News Service) Petrograd, Nov. 3.—It was officially announced today that Russia has refused the tardy explanation from Turkey of the Black sea raid and that the Turkish charge d'affaires has left here and the Russian ambassador has withdrawn from Constantinople.

It is further stated at the foreign ministry that a state of war existed between Russia and Turkey. Neither has issued a declaration of hostilities.

Russia has ordered all Turkish subjects out within a week.

Dispatches received at the war office state that the Turks attacked the Russians in the government of Kars, southeast of Trebizond.

HIDDEN WIRELESS TELLS FOE OF ALLIES MOVES

Paris, Nov. 3.—A wireless station in the allied lines, the location of which has not been discovered, is being used by the Germans to report all movements of the French troops, according to statements made to Gen. Pierre Cherif by wounded soldiers, who had been brought back from the front. Every effort has been made to find the mysterious station, but without result.

Gen. Cherif mentions this in illustrating the thoroughness of the German system of making war. Their absolute knowledge of all parts of the country has permitted them to make advance arrangements which are serving them well. At Lassigny a mushroom pasture was found to have been converted into a munition depot, while a spot near Dixmunde had been prepared for some time before to rest the German wounded.

"It is this scientific precision and perfect method," says Cherif, "which has permitted the Germans to choose so well the line from the Aisne and in front of Rheims, there to fasten a sufficiently easy resistance which still lasts."

GAME BOG KILLED DEER OUT OF SEASON NEAR PENFIELD

An unknown hunter killed a deer on the mountain last week. The man was seen carrying the hind-quarter down the nePfield pike, but the game authorities who are on the case have so far been unable to identify the man who killed the deer some twelve days before the season opens.

Price of Meat Not to Advance At Present

(By International News Service) Chicago, Nov. 3.—Whether the price of fresh meat is rapid because of partial quarantines established over the Union Stock yards, depends upon Armour, Swift and Company, whom the government once tried to prove was a trust.

J. O. Ogden, Armour stated this morning that there would be no advance in prices, thanks to federal quarantine on the shipment of live animals from the yards. Armour is in a position to say that the quarantine

Diary Found on Body of Private Tells a Pitiful Story

RETREAT AN AWFUL HORROR

Kaiser's Troops Unable to Get Rations
Even After They Were Fortified on a New Line in France—Many of Them Go Without Food For Many Days.

Paris, Nov. 3.—Here is the story of a German private who was found dead in a trench—not dead from wounds, but from starvation—and this story, in the form of a diary, was found apparently up to the last day, was found on him. It begins with the advance of the Crown Prince's army upon the Marne, after the battle of Charleroi and the fall of Longwy.

"Yesterday was a day of rejoicing. Our first army has pushed back the French, defeated a division of English cavalry and is before the gates of Paris. In Russia our troops have taken 150,000 prisoners. The joy would have been greater if we had had something to eat. Our division leaves for Marson, St. Amand and Bossuet, where we are to bivouac before crossing the Marne tomorrow. We hope to get rations there."

"We finally stopped long enough to take a bite. It didn't take long because what they gave us was just enough to put a sharper edge on our appetites. Then we went toward the Marne, pushing back detachments of the French. They let us come to this very edge of the stream; our advance guard was even partly across the bridge, when their artillery opened fire; it seemed to us that it opened the gates of hell at the same time. We could not advance and we had no orders to retire. We could only stand and watch the carnage around the bridge, where our losses were terrible. We succeeded in saving the flag and our commander and then were ordered to retire. It was not exactly a defeat the officers say—only a retirement. The battle resumed a little later and lasted nearly all night. We went forward again, but were obliged to dig ourselves in to escape the terrible artillery fire. The morning seemed to be bleak."

Raw Potatoes a Delicacy

"This morning, November 2, the French flying machine, one of the new type, was seen flying over the trenches. One of the soldiers was seen to be eating a potato. It is a very rare sight to see a soldier eating a potato. The soldiers have suffered from lack of food for many days. The French flying machine was seen to be eating a potato. ELECTION RETURNS

A direct telegraph wire was installed in the Progress office today, which will furnish the people of Clearfield with the complete results of the election today. A moving picture stereopticon will flash the reports in the Progress' front window as fast as they are received. This service will start as soon as the Opera house and Y. M. C. A. close for the night and will continue till morning.

SENATORS TO BE ELECTED IN THIRTY-ONE STATES

Herewith is a list of the candidates of the three leading parties for the United States senate and house of representatives, who are being voted for today. The figures in the last column show, as nearly as possible, the vote in the respective states and congressional districts in the last general election.

Senate
Senators are to be elected in 31 states. Owing to the death of Senator Bacon, two senators will be elected from Georgia. Because of the death of Senator Bradley, two senators also will be elected from Kentucky, but one of these two will serve only until March 4 next, and the other will assume the seat upon that date. There are, therefore, only 32 senatorial seats to be filled.

The number of senators holding over or already elected to serve in the next congress is 64, divided as follows:
Democrats 37.
Republicans 26.
Progressive 1.

The total membership of the senate is 96; necessary for a majority 49. The Democrats, therefore, in order to retain their majority will have to elect not less than 12 of the 32 who will be chosen at this election. As a matter of fact they are practically certain of electing the senators from Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia (2), Kentucky, Maryland, Missouri, Nevada, North Carolina, Oklahoma and South Carolina—a total of 12. So there is little possibility of the Democrats losing control of the senate in this election.

HIGH SCHOOL PLAY
AT OPERA HOUSE

"The District Attorney" To Be Given By High School

A STORY OF LOVE AND POLITICS

Performance to be Staged Next Friday Evening—Students Who Have Been Chosen for the Parts Have Been Rehearsing Faithfully and a Good Show is Promised.

"The District Attorney" is the title of the play which will be staged next Friday evening in the opera house by the members of the local high school. The cast have been hard at work for the past three weeks and are fast rounding the play into shape so that by the time the curtain goes up they will be prepared to present a finished product to the townspeople. The play is strictly modern in every particular, full of dash and vim and is bound to please. Politics and romance, when combined into a play, provide something out of the ordinary and this is what "The District Attorney" does. The hero of the play is induced to give up football and to run for district attorney, merely to split the stronger man's ticket. To everybody's surprise he is elected and it becomes his duty to prosecute a graft scandal in which Mr. Seabury, the father of the girl of his choice, is implicated, and when it is too late to stop the proceedings he learns that his own father, now dead, was also a party in the scandal. He continues in his purpose and Mr. Seabury, in a spirit of shame, takes his own life. This turns the daughter's love into hatred, but in the end circumstances are such that a reconciliation is effected and past offences forgotten.

Tickets are now on sale at 25, 50, and 75 cents, while reservations will be made at the box office after 8 A. M. on Friday.

The Cast
Mr. William Seabury, president Seabury Packing Co., Malvin Neff, '16 Herbert Brownell, reporter of Tribune, John Graham, '15 Richard Seabury, senior at college, Wm. Leitzinger, '16 Bob Kendrick, a fixture at the university, Dale Chapman, '15 Billy Reynolds, a freshman at college, Willard Chase, '15 P. Homer Sullivan, politician, Elmer Kurtz, '15 Joe J. Crosby, district attorney, running for reelection, Howard Stewart, '16 Jerome O'Brien, Russell Bratton, '17 Henry Gilbert, George Little, Arthur Anderson, '17, and Charles Taylor.

Attempt to Capture Warsaw
by Kaiser's Troops
Proves a Failure

AUSTRIANS DEFEATED IN ANOTHER SORTIE

Przemysl Garrison Makes Another Unsuccessful Effort to Escape From the City and are Forced into Their Fortifications—Germans Pursued to Abandon Their Advantage on the Yzer, Gained by Them at Heavy Loss of Life, and Allies Have Regained the Crossings on That River.

(By International News Service) Petrograd, Nov. 3.—An army messenger states that the German left wing that attempted to capture Warsaw has been driven back across the Russian frontier into Posen.

The government press bureau announces that the Przemysl garrison attempted another unsuccessful sortie. The Russian left captured 3700 prisoners and drove the rest of the Austrians back into their fortifications.

Germans Lose on the Yzer
Paris, Nov. 3.—The advantage which the Germans gained by securing a foothold at terrific loss of life on the left bank of the Yzer has been abandoned, it is officially stated. The Germans are withdrawing the allies regaining the Yzer crossings.

Germans Fall to Gain
Amsterdam, Nov. 3.—(By way of London)—The correspondent of the Handelsblad at Sluis telegraphs as follows: "All German attempts to break through the line of the allied forces between Nieupoort and Dismunde failed. In spite of the greatest sacrifices, the Germans have not succeeded in gaining ground on the other bank of the canal.

Not War, but Butchery
"Communication with Ostend is almost completely interrupted. Permits to leave Bruges are no longer given but tram cars are still running and the German marine band gives daily concerts in the market place. German soldiers, tired of the war, continue to cross the frontier near Sluis in large numbers. They declare that it is no longer a question of supplies but of butchering."

PRESIDENT WILSON GOES

Washington, Nov. 3.—President Wilson departed at 6 o'clock this morning for Princeton to vote the Democratic ticket in New Jersey. He plans to return to the White House tonight for the election returns.

AGED TYLER HUNTER
HAS PRETTY GOOD LUCK

Several bear have been shot in the section between Penfield and Tyler already this season. Saturday a man from Charleroi came in on the B. & O. with a fine carcass which he bagged in Potter county. The fur was exceptionally fine. "Old Man" Wallace, a famous hunter, of Tyler, had a profitable quest last week when he slew a bear, three coons, a few birds and found three well stocked bee trees.

British Ship
Destroyed
by Turks

(By International News Service) London, Nov. 3.—It was officially announced today by the government press bureau that a British ship was destroyed when two Turkish cruisers bombarded the Russian port at Novorossysk.

This information came to the government from the vice consul at Novorossysk. The steamer Frederika was burned and scuttled.

Italy Concerned in North African Trouble

(By International News Service) Rome, Nov. 3.—Italy and Great Britain have agreed to stand together for the common defense of their colonies in Africa, if Turkey goes to war. The understanding may become operative at any moment. Declaration of the Turkish war is anxiously awaited. Italy now openly declared that Turkey's intervention would mean the end of Italy's hope to unite for mutual defense Africa, along the Red sea and the Aegean are so gravely menaced as to be England.

In government circles there is no longer an attempt to deny that in Egypt, Italy is as much threatened by Turkey as England and France, while Somalia and Eritrea are surrounded by British possessions. Hence, it is obviously indispensable for Italy and England close friends and neighbors to unite for mutual defense.

What real sportsmen want is a guarantee on game hogs.

It will be a real Thanksgiving this year if Penrose is defeated.

The Pinchot vote in the state is going to surprise the enemy.

Good evening! Perfectly satisfied that you voted right, are you?

Now drop politics and work for the betterment of conditions in Clearfield.

Become a vegetarian and laugh at the threat of a meat famine in this country.

Now that the hospital debt has been cancelled the institution should take on a new lease of life.

Farewell to the hopes of A. Mitchell Palmer that he will receive the next presidential nomination of his party.

It is stated that Palmer was a Republican until he went to Stroudsburg, which accounts for his efforts to elect Penrose.

Clearfield people evidently believe that charity begins at home and remains there until all deserving cases have been taken care of.

The man who "told you so" will appear on the scene tomorrow morning. The fine for assault and battery is four sixty-two, as usual.

As usual, the enterprise of the Progress eclipses anything in the newspaper line in this section of the state. Getting the election news before the big city papers arrive in the town is something new for Clearfielders.

"EMINENTLY RESPECTABLE"

During the campaign which closes today a number of what are termed "eminently respectable" citizens of Pennsylvania declared it as their intention to vote for the Republican candidates, although these candidates were endorsed by the liquor interests. Political conditions in this state are acknowledged to be worse than those in any other state in the union, and the people place the blame on Penrose. But the responsibility for these conditions rests upon the shoulders of the "eminently respectable" citizens who not only vote to uphold Penroseism, but by their example induce other people to follow their example.

There are quite a number of ministers of the gospel in the list of "eminently respectable" citizens who supported Penrose and Brumbaugh, despite the fact that both of these candidates were endorsed by the friends of liquor. Doubtless many voters were misled into supporting the Republican candidates by the attitude of these ministers, therefore the endorsement given to the forces of evil in this state is greatly to be deplored by decent people. While ministers have the right to decide in their own minds how and for whom they will vote they are expected to support the friends of morality at all times.

It is not surprising that monopolists, men who have for years profited from the excessive tariff duties levied under Republican rule, should favor the election of Penrose, for monopolists are at all times selfish, but the business men of the state who supported Penrose because they believed his election would bring about better conditions in a commercial sense were thinking more of the almighty dollar than of the moral issues at stake. It is a disgraceful state of affairs that causes men of apparent respectability to vote for candidates who represent the lowest elements of social life in the state. Penroseism stands for all that decent people must denounce and condemn.

POSTMASTERS IN TROUBLE

Several postmasters in this part of the state have gotten themselves in trouble by their pernicious activity during the campaign. Political post cards sent out by campaign managers whose politics differed from that of the postmasters have been destroyed, in accordance, we presume, with the old-time tactics of the ultra partisan who believed that the people should not be enlightened by information emanating from the offices of the opposition.

Both Republican and Democratic postmasters have been found to have performed the trick of aiding their respective party candidates by "accidentally" burning or otherwise destroying mail matter intended for the voter, and there is likely to be an investigation by the postoffice department which may result in the ousting of these thoughtless postmasters. It is safe to say in this connection that had the postcards sent to Bellwood, Blair county, been from Penrose headquarters they would not have been "accidentally" burned.

Little son, the men-folk go

Forth in arms to meet the foe.

Fighting for the home-land holy,

Fight like men the men-folk go.

Little son, live thou to be

Are they marching by the Rhine?

Have they crossed the border line?

Go they where the raging Cossacks

Drink the blood of men like wine?

SUFFRAGE ELECTION

(By International News Service)

New York, Nov. 3.—The following statement has been made by the National American Woman Suffrage association:

In Ohio, Nebraska, Missouri, Montana, Nevada, North and South Dakota, woman suffrage amendments will be submitted to the voters today. Victories in these states will mean sixty-seven more electoral votes cast by states in which women have the franchise on equal terms with men. Winning Ohio will be politically and psychologically the most important gain the suffrage movement has made, because Ohio is entitled to twenty-four electoral votes. In the nine states having equal suffrage at present and Illinois, which has given partial suffrage to women including the presidential franchise, the total electoral vote is eighty-four. Should a majority of the seven campaign states go for suffrage today, votes for women will, it is expected, become a political question of national importance.

CHAPTER XLIII.

Camp-for-the-Night.
"Well, gents!" the driver observed cheerfully, withdrawing head and hands from long and intimate conversation with the suburban gentles beneath the hood. "I reckon you-all may'st well make up your minds to christen this byeh suburban spot Camp-for-the-Night. You won't be galls no farther—not just 't present. Putting this old wagon through them desert roads back yonder has just naturally broke the heart of that engine!"

"What, precisely, is the trouble?" Alan Law inquired, rousing from anxious preoccupation.

"Plumb bust' all to hell," the chauffeur explained tersely.
"Nothing could be fairer, more exact and comprehensive than that," from Barcus commented.

Law nodded a tad too weary to respond to the o. c.'s humor. His worried eyes reviewed the scene of the breakdown.

"What's to be done?" Mr. Law wondered aloud.

"Take it calm," the affable chauffeur advised. "Frettin' won't get you-all nothin'. If it was me, I'd call it a day, make a fig, get them cushions out of the car, and get some rest. You can't do nothin' till I get back, anyway, and that won't be much before sunup."

"Where are you going?" Barcus demanded.

"Walkin', friend; just walkin'—"

"What for?"

"To fetch help—leastways, unless you've got some kick comin' and 'ud rather stop here permanent—"

He turned off and bustled himself with preparations against his journey.

"It's simply things like this make me believe this isn't, after all, nothing more nor less than a long-drawn-out nightmare," Barcus observed nervously.

But Mr. Law was no more attending; he had turned away and was just then standing by the running-board of the motor car and civilly explaining to Miss Judith Trine the purpose of the chauffeur's expedition.

Discovery of this circumstance worked a deep wrinkle between the brows as well as into the humor of Mr. Barcus.

Here, he promised himself, was a situation to titillate the Comic Muse itself. He pointed out in turn the several component parts: the motor car swiveling in the hollow of those awful and silent hills—for all the world like a mouse petrified with fright at finding itself in the midst of a herd of elephants; in the car, that aged monomaniac, Mr. Seneca Trine, author of all their woes and misadventures, gnashing his teeth in impotent rage to find himself in close juxtaposition to and helpless to injure the man for whose life he lusted with an insatiable passion; the latter standing outside the car, in polite conversation with Mr. Trine's audacious Judith—talking to her in the friendliest fashion imaginable, precisely as if she had not and to seek to advantage himself of them.

His head craned out horribly on his long, wasted neck as he pitched a silent whisper for her ears, and his face in the moonlight seemed to glow with the reflection of that inferno which smoldered in his evil bosom.

But one was silenced, the other quenching, all in a twinkling. His daughter turned on him in a flash of imperious rage.

Barcus caught snatches of the woman's tirade.

"Be silent!" he heard her say. "Be silent, do you hear? Don't ever speak to me again unless you want me to replace that gag. I say, don't speak to me!"

"I am finished with you once and for all time; never again shall you pervert my nature to your damnable purposes—never again shall word or wish of yours drive me to lift my hand against a man who has never done you the least harm, though your persecution of him would have acquitted him of a charge of manslaughter in any court—on grounds of self-defense!"

"Understand me!" she raged. "I'm through. Henceforth I go my way, and you yours."

Her voice broke. She clenched her hands into two tight fists with the effort at self-control, and lifted a written face to the moonlight.

"God help us both!" she cried.

CHAPTER XLIV.

As in a Glass, Darkly.
Thoughtfully Mr. Barcus returned his attention to the lovers.

If the evidence of his senses did not mislead him, he was witnessing their first difference of opinion. It was not an argument acute enough to deserve the name of quarrel; but undoubtedly the two were at odds upon some question—Rose insistent, Alan reluctant.

The last gave way in the end, shrugged, returned to the car.

"I'm going back up the trail," he announced, and hesitated oddly.

"Feeling the need of some little exercise, no doubt," Barcus suggested.

"Rose thinks it's dangerous to stop here," Alan began to explain, ignoring the interruption.

"Miss Rose is right—eh, Miss Judith?" Barcus interpolated.

Judith nodded darkly.

"So I'm going to see if I can't buy burros from the prospector back there," Rose says he has some—doesn't know how many—"

"Three will be enough," Judith interposed. "I mean, don't get one for me. I'm stopping here."

"But—" Alan started to protest.

She gave him pause with a weary gesture.

"Please! It's no good arguing, Mr. Law; I've made up my mind; I can be most helpful here, by my father's side," she asserted, and nodded at Trine with a significant smile that maddened him. "He needs me—and no harm can come to me; I'm pretty well able to take care of myself!"

At this the innocent bystander breathed an unheard but fervent little prayer of thanksgiving, whose spirit he doubted not was shared by Alan.

For it stuck in the memory of Barcus that their friend, the prospector (whose shack had sheltered Rose and Barcus after their transit of the desert, and prior to the man-made avalanche, which had afforded this temporary immunity from pursuit) had mentioned in the hearing of Rose the fact that his string of burros was limited to three.

This, then, must have been the nub of the lovers' quarrel; Rose's insistence that Judith be left behind, Alan's reluctance to consent to this last he convicted himself of the charge of rank ingratitude, remembering the great service his erstwhile antagonist had done him.

If only Judith might not find cause to change her mind!

He set himself sedulously to divert Judith with the magic of his conversational powers—an offering indifferent, if received. He was still blithely gossiping when Judith swung away to her sister's side.

The ensuing quarrel seemed but the more portentous in view of the restraint imposed upon themselves by both parties thereto.

He believed, however, that a crisis impended when the tinkle of mule bells sounded down the canyon road, and at this he threw discretion to the winds and ran toward the two with

"COUNTRY INNOCENCE" AT OPERA HOUSE TONIGHT

"Country Innocence" is a pathetic human interest drama at the opera house this evening. The climax of the story is distressing to the leading characters, but the play is an appeal against existing conditions and a plea for their betterment.

"Carmen's Wash Day," an amusing feature at the opera house. Ford Sterling captivated his audience in the Lucille Love series, but in these comedies we see him at his best.

"The Mountain Law," a strong story of a mountain feud and the course of mountain law.

For gets into domestic trouble through a baby. At the Globe tonight.

Seven good pictures will be shown at the Globe tonight, each and all of them highly entertaining.

Society

A farewell party was held in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Twigg, on Park street Monday evening. They will make their future home in Philadelphia where Mr. Twigg has accepted a better position with Lauderbach-Barber Co., of that place.

A delightful evening was spent playing games, and elegant music was rendered by Mrs. Myra Shaw, of Weaver street.

These present were: Mr. and Mrs. Frank Howell, Mr. and Mrs. Scott McKelvey, and daughter Lucille, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wells and children Genevieve, Byrd and Robert, Mr. and Mrs. Homer McDowell, Mr. and Mrs. William Hoover, Mr. and Mrs. James McLaughlin, Mr. and Mrs. Ira Shaw, Mrs. Wm. Daugherty, Mrs. Alex. Ben, Mr. Jack Zimmer, Mrs. Myra Shaw, Bessie Trump and Eva Baumgarner, Messrs. Lloyd Shaw, James Young and Willis Powell.

Delicious refreshments were served after which the guests reluctantly departed to their homes. Although we are sorry to lose Mr. and Mrs. Twigg from our society, we all wish them prosperity in their new home.

PENNSYLVANIA FARMERS HAD BIG HAY CROP THIS YEAR

Washington, D. C. Nov. 3.—Pennsylvania farmers produced 4,083,000 tons of tame or cultivated hay in 1914, according to the preliminary estimate made today by the United States Department of Agriculture. The yield last year was 4,146,000 tons. The product is selling for an average of $14.40 per ton, compared with $13.70 per ton in 1913. The yield per acre this season is 1.30 tons and the quality is one per cent better than the average crop for the past ten years.

The remainder of that business was transacted rapidly enough. There were no preparations to be made; once Alan had ridden up with his three burros, nothing remained but to mount and make off without delay.

Before morning they were all riding like so many hypnotized subjects, fatigue bearing so heavily on all their senses that none spoke or cared to speak.

Broad daylight surprised them in this state, still stubbornly traveling; and shortly afterward showed them one place so perilous that it shocked them temporarily awake.

This was simply a spot where the trail came abruptly to an end on one side of a cleft in the hills quite thirty feet wide and several hundred in depth, and was continued on the farther side, the chasm being spanned by a bridge of the simplest character—no more than a footway of board bound together with ropes none to substantia! in seeming, with another rope, breast-high, to serve as a hand-rail.

Alan tested the bridge cautiously; it bore him. He returned, helped Rose to cross, and with her once safely landed on the other side, took his life in his hands and, aided by a Barcus unaffectedly afflicted with qualms, somehow or other (neither of them knew precisely how) persuaded the burros to cross.

After that, though the way grew more broad and easy and even showed symptoms of a decline, they had not enough strength left to sustain through another hour.

And what they thought good for tune, opportunely at this pass, brought them to a clearing dotted with the buildings of an abandoned copper mine. Not a soul was in evidence there, but the rude structures offered shelter for beast as well as man.

Barely had they made Rose as comfortable as might be upon the rough plank flooring of one of the sheds and tethered the burros out of sight, when Alan collapsed as if drugged, while Barcus, who had elected himself to keep the first watch and purposed doing it in a sitting position, with his back against the door-jamb, fell sleep overcoming him like a dense, dark cloud.

RAILROAD

PENNSY FINDS SLUMP IN FREIGHT TRAFFIC

One of the greatest slumps in freight traffic over the Pennsy's Mid division occurred during the month of October, 1914, according to figures taken from the local records of the company. An unusually noticeable decrease was emphasized when a comparison of the total movement for the preceding month was made.

During the past month, the Pennsy hauled 150,144 cars over the division, with an average of 5,101 per day. Of the total movement, 94,962 cars were loaded. Of the number of loaded cars, 21,978 were hauled westward and 72,978 were transported eastward.

In October, 1913, the Pennsy's car movement on the division was 188,706 cars, or an increase of 21,024 cars over October 1914. In September 1914 the loaded movement over the division totaled 97,687, which is an increase of 8,890 cars over the month ended at 12 o'clock Saturday night.

Increased Production Asked.

F. R. Stevens, agriculturist of the Lehigh Valley railroad, is calling on farmers along his road to increase their acreage and the efficiency of their farms now that one of the effects of the war in Europe will be a reduction in the world's food supply.

"This is a situation which must be met," says Mr. Stevens, in a letter to the farmers, "and met by American farmers. In another year all Europe will look to the United States for food. To meet the increased demand all farmers must increase their production."

New Station Opened.

A few minutes after midnight Saturday Katy passenger train No. 26 from the south pulled into the new Union station and Kansas City began the use of the third largest railway terminal. The Pennsylvania terminal at New York and the Union station at Glasgow, Scotland, are larger.

Fifty million dollars has been spent for terminal facilities here by the twelve railroads owning the new station. And it contains every convenience for the traveling public.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

Mixed with Sulphur it Darkens so Naturally Nobody can Tell.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's treatment, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides, beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance which is so attractive; besides, prevents dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair.

No Doubt Which Came First in His Esteem.

Ellen little short of compassing his death, not once, but half a dozen times; Judith herself poised on the running-board and smiling down at her victim with a warmth patently even more than the warmth of friendship; and at some little distance, Rose, Mr. Law's dancie and Judith's sister, dotting her heart out with jealousy of this new-sprung intimacy between her sister and her lover!

"Bad business, my friend," Barcus mentally apostrophized the unwitting Alan Law.

He interrupted himself to nod knowingly and with profound conviction: "I knew it. Now it begins again!"

For Rose had abruptly taken a hand in the affair, a gesture of exasperation, prefacing her call: "Alan!"

To her Mr. Law turned instantly with such alacrity that none who watched might doubt which of the two women came first in his esteem.

Nor was this wasted upon it under standing of Judith. Evening her ear rowly though furtively, Mr. Barcus saw her handsome face darken ominously.

And her father was as quick to recognize these portents of trouble

CORRESPONDENCE

BETHLEHEM

Quite a crowd of young people were out enjoying themselves on Halloween night.

Allan Haney and wife were shopping in Clearfield Saturday.

Quite a crowd of young people from this place and Stoneville attended protracted meeting at Spring Valley last Thursday evening. Among those who were present were Willis Irwin, George Litz, Albert Jones and Miss Lottie Flegal and Amy Royer, Miss Lanetta Flegal and Fred Royer and Miss Stella Holman and Lloyd P. Stone.

Game is not very plentiful in this section of the country. William Wolencroft, a crackerjack of this place, having only 9 birds so far.

Blake Shugart was in town Saturday and took in the football game at the park.

John Stone, Jr., called at the home of Frank Smeal on Saturday evening. Fred Royer is spending a few days at his home in Frenchville.

A. H. Haney had quite a scare on Sunday when he missed a horse and buggy. Thinking that someone had taken it he was about to report it to the police when it finally came to his memory that he had hired it to a boy from Stoneville to meet the 2:57 train at Woodland and drive the Stoneville school teacher over.

Mrs. Frank Stone will give her many friends a party on November 8th.

Willie Long was seen driving around last Saturday with his new motor.

John Brown had business in Clearfield Saturday.

Andrew Hoover is able to be around again, having been in the Clearfield hospital on account of eye trouble.

Miss Viola Hess is living with Mrs.

John Olson, of Dimeling.

Lloyd P. Stone was seen going to work John Stone's the other evening with a book under his arm. He must be taking some special night study.

George Litz has gone to Rockton, where he will spend a few days hunting.

Clearfield, R. F. D. No. 2.

J. A. Johnston, proprietor of Goodview farm, has some sand, or potatoes on his land, a weed that is not very prevalent in this climate; indeed, those on Mr. Johnston's farm are the only ones we have ever seen around here but further south, especially in Maryland and Virginia, they are a pest.

The nettles are very poisonous and make bad sores if gotten in the hands. Mr. Johnston is contemplating sending some to State college to find out how to get rid of them. Has any one any experience with them?

Dr. Owens has just finished husking his corn and has a fine lot of good hard A No. 1 corn; also fine fodder as he had it while the crops were still green.

Ed Merrifield is busy digging his potatoes. He has a fine crop, but the weeds grow up so thickly after he has cultivated that his brothers, John and Ed, are helping him.

John Butler has just finished digging his potatoes. We have spoken of the quality of these tubers before, but we want to say again that they are as fine a lot of potatoes as ever grew.

Sam Delbert is building a stable. D. W. Anderson must contemplate doing some farming out at his mines as he is clearing and plowing the hillside nearby.

PERSONAL

November 3, 1914

Mrs. Paul Stauffer entertained at cards last evening.

John Barratt is getting along nicely at the hospital.

Thomas Lynch, of Galeton, is the guest of relatives in town.

Mr. and Mrs. Barnes, of Galeton, are the guests of Mrs. Wallace Morrow.

David Dean, of Luthersburg, visited his sister, Mrs. Mai LaBarre, yesterday.

Miss Gertrude McLaughlin, of DuBois, has entered the Clearfield hospital nurses' training school.

Ed Wilhelm and sister, Miss Bell, of Williamsport, who were visiting relatives here have returned to their home.

Mrs. W. E. Phillips entertained members of the L. E. C. club and friends at her home on Fourth street last evening.

Hazel Kramer, who was operated upon for appendicitis at the hospital last week, was moved to her home yesterday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Herb Albert, of DuBois, motored to Clearfield Sunday and spent the day at D. C. Burkett's on Locust street.

D. C. Burkett, who with George Dewalt, is autoing to Florida, writes that they are enjoying every mile of the trip. The roads have been good and the weather favorable.

GERMAN SOLDIERS DIE OF HUNGER

lucky enough to dig up some raw potatoes, which comforted us a little.

"A great battle was announced for today, September 9. We have been in the trenches four days now and the rest after long marches would be agreeable if there were no dead bodies of men and horses, and if the flies didn't pester us terribly.

"The great battle did not come off, but today, September 10, we could see, half a mile off, the French artillery, strongly entrenched. They say strong forces of the enemy are in front of us, but that we need fear nothing. A heavy battle is going on on our right wing. It seems that the French army is in a bad position; to get out it must retire on Paris or break through our lines.

"At 2 o'clock today, September 11, we were ordered to leave the trenches. We thought it would be to attack the enemy, but it seems we are to go back. Two French army corps have pierced our lines. Away we went, without taking time to eat, through destroyed villages, where there is nothing to pick up. We had nothing to eat until 10 o'clock, just a morsel, and then went on until 8 o'clock in the morning.

Only One Meal in Days
"Today, September 12, we had a little bread with coffee. We are suffering terribly from privation and exhaustion. They tell us we are executing a turning movement, not a retreat. To us it looks like flight. Finally we arrived at Souain, where we hoped to eat, but instead of rations they gave us shovels with which to dig trenches, in the pouring rain. While we were at it French sharpshooters drove us back with the trenches uncompleted. The entire force was obliged to retire.

"Today, September 14, we have dug ourselves in again and remain, stuck against man, all day in our trenches. We have eaten nothing all day; we suffer atrociously from hunger and thirst; the rain comes down in torrents, but we can't leave the trenches because of the shower of shrapnel from the enemy's guns. Finally, this afternoon, we had our first repast for several days, consisting of rice with a little meat and bread and a morsel of bacon. It was like a drop of water on a hot iron.

"The French have occupied the trenches we left at Souain, three miles back. Behind us is Somme, a ruins, occupied by our troops. To-day the French artillery gave us a little respite, but toward 6:30 o'clock it reopened the hellish fire, which continued very late in the night, at the rate of a shot every 10 minutes, just sufficient to leave us no repose. It is a dog's life we are leading and we shall soon be sick—every man.

Dies Victim of Hunger
"Today, September 23, we were ordered into the first line of trenches, having before us a battalion of the One Hundred and Sixty-first, which has suffered great losses. Toward 1, the artillery opened a violent fire, and the shell supply rained upon our lines. We were obliged to keep close to our trenches, unable to leave them for anything. We are all nearly famished.

"Today, September 30, the devilish French guns have swept off half of our company; their fire is so constant that we have not time to fix ourselves. We are still confined to the trenches, and it is two days since we were served meagre rations of rice and coffee made with rain water. The cold north winds have followed the rain and added to our suffering. Many of the men are so cramped with rheumatism that we are obliged to lift them out of the trenches.

"Today, October 4, we have eaten again and the rations were more generous; but it seems impossible for us to satisfy our hunger.
"This morning, October 8, happily it does not rain, but the temperature blows from the north and makes us feel our hunger all the more. They say there are plenty of provisions in the rear; the question is to get them, so as in face of the French artillery which sweeps the ground constantly and makes life impossible except under cover of the trenches. Hunger is terrible. I suffer horribly from the cold, and I am no longer able to keep up. I don't think I can last much longer."

What real sportsmen want is a guarantee on game hogs.

It will be a real Thanksgiving this year if Penrose is defeated.

The Pinchot vote in the state is going to surprise the enemy.

Good evening! Perfectly satisfied that you voted right, are you?

Now drop politics and work for the betterment of conditions in Clearfield.

Become a vegetarian and laugh at the threat of a meat famine in this country.

Now that the hospital debt has been cancelled the institution should take on a new lease of life.

Farewell to the hopes of A. Mitchell Palmer that he will receive the next presidential nomination of his party.

It is stated that Palmer was a Republican until he went to Stroudsburg, which accounts for his efforts to elect Penrose.

Clearfield people evidently believe that charity begins at home and remains there until all deserving cases have been taken care of.

The man who "told you so" will appear on the scene tomorrow morning. The time for assault and battery is four sixty-two, as usual.

As usual, the enterprise of the Progress eclipses anything in the newspaper line in this section of the state. Getting the election news before the big city papers arrive in the town is something new for Clearfielders.

"EMINENTLY RESPECTABLE"

During the campaign which closes today a number of what are termed "eminently respectable" citizens of Pennsylvania declared it as their intention to vote for the Republican candidates, although these candidates were endorsed by the liquor interests. Political conditions in this state are acknowledged to be worse than those in any other state in the union, and the people place the blame on Penrose. But the responsibility for these conditions rests upon the shoulders of the "eminently respectable" citizens who not only vote to uphold Penroseism, but by their example induce other people to follow their example.

There are quite a number of ministers of the gospel in the list of "eminently respectable" citizens who supported Penrose and Brumbaugh, despite the fact that both of these candidates were endorsed by the friends of booze. Doubtless many voters were misled into supporting the Republican candidates by the attitude of these ministers, therefore the endorsement given to the forces of evil in this state is greatly to be deplored by decent people. While ministers have the right to decide in their own minds how and for whom they will vote they are expected to support the friends of morality at all times.

It is not surprising that monopolists, men who have for years profited from the excessive tariff duties levied under Republican rule, should favor the election of Penrose, for monopolists are at all times selfish, but the business men of the state who supported Penrose because they believed his election would bring about better conditions in a commercial sense were thinking more of the almighty dollar than of the moral issues at stake. It is a disgraceful state of affairs that causes men of apparent respectability to vote for candidates who represent the lowest elements of social life in the state. Penroseism stands for all that decent people must denounce and condemn.

POSTMASTERS IN TROUBLE

Several postmasters in this part of the state have gotten themselves in trouble by their pernicious activity during the campaign. Political post cards sent out by campaign managers whose politics differed from that of the postmasters have been destroyed, in accordance, we presume, with the old-time tactics of the ultra partisan who believed that the people should not be enlightened by information emanating from the offices of the opposition.

Both Republican and Democratic postmasters have been found to have performed the trick of aiding their respective party candidates by "accidentally" burning or otherwise destroying mail matter intended for the voter, and there is likely to be an investigation by the postoffice department which may result in the ousting of these thoughtless postmasters. It is safe to say in this connection that had the postcards sent to Bellwood, Blair county, been from Penrose headquarters they would not have been "accidentally" burned.

Other People's Opinions

Now that we elect judges on the non-partisan ballot, we can expect to see a few high-minded judges where we had high-handed judges before—Philadelphia North American.

Holland is trying her best to be neutral, but it is a fact that her foreign minister is part Scotch.—Pittsburgh Times.

One way to discourage the soap box agitators might be to pay less attention to them.—Sioux City Journal.

Just wait until Mrs. Pankhurst gets to some of those German towns!—Columbia State.

BAVARIAN CRADLE SONG

Little son, the men-folk go
Forth in arms to meet the foe.
Fighting for the home-land holy,
Fighting like men the men-folk go.
Little son, live thou to be
Brother, husband, friend to me.

Are they marching by the Rhine?
Have they crossed the border line?
Go they where the raging Cossacks
Drink the blood of men like wine?
Where they go, there fights till death
German honor, German faith.

Little son, if hopes are vain,
If the brave come not again,
If to save the home-land holy
God requires the final pain.
Little son, live thou to be
Brother, husband, friend to me.

SUFFRAGE ELECTION

(By International News Service)
New York, Nov. 3.—The following statement has been made by the National American Woman Suffrage association:

In Ohio, Nebraska, Missouri, Montana, Nevada, North and South Dakota, woman suffrage amendments will be submitted to the voters today. Victories in these states will mean sixty-seven more electoral votes cast by states in which women have the franchise on equal terms with men. Winning Ohio will be politically and psychologically the most important gain the suffrage movement has made, because Ohio is entitled to twenty-four electoral votes. In the nine states having equal suffrage at present and Illinois, which has given partial suffrage to women including the presidential franchise, the total electoral vote is eighty-four. Should a majority of the seven campaign states go for suffrage today, votes for women will, it is expected, become a political question of national importance.

AMERICAN GENIUS SHOWN IN PATENT OFFICE REPORT

Washington, D. C. Nov. 3.—Yankee ingenuity is greater than ever, the annual report of Thomas Ewing, 5,000 commissioner of patents, would indicate. In the fiscal year ending June 30th the number of applications for patents and the number of patents issued reached new high marks. Applications for patents for inventions numbered 69,311 and patents granted 36,276; compared with 67,093 and 35,025 respectively for the previous year. There were also granted 1,773 design patents, 175 reissued patents, 5,751 triadic marks, 720 labels and 339 prints. The total of patents granted and trademarks, labels and prints registered was 45,089. The patent office is one branch of the government which shows a progressive record. Its total $2,169,303.95 and expenditures $1,929,132.52, leaving a net surplus of $240,556.43. The total surplus to date is $7,530,950.26. During the year 2,779,205 printed copies of patents were sold bringing to the office a revenue of $123,371.53, an increase of 13.04 per cent. in the number, and an increase of 9.4 per cent in the amount over the year 1913. Typewritten copies of records, aggregating 29,100,560 words, were furnished, for which the office received the sum of $2,109.59 and for certificates attached thereto the sum of $3,407.25. The number of letters constituting the miscellaneous correspondence received and indexed during the year was 294,452. While 71,941 applications for patents, designs and reissues were filed, there were also filed during the year 292,054 amendments to pending applications.

Notice of Application

"Notice is hereby given that application will be made to the public service commission of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania by the Central District Telephone company for a certificate of public convenience evidencing the commission's approval of an agreement with the Western Union Telegraph company for the sub-lease of office room in the city of DuBois, the public hearing on which will be held in the rooms of the commission at Harrisburg, on the 4th day of November, A. D. 1914, at 2:30 P. M., when and where all persons in interest may appear and be heard if they so desire."

CHAPTER XLIII.

Camp-for-the-Night.
"Well, gents," the driver observed cheerfully, withdrawing head and hands from long and intimate conversation with the suburban genius beneath the hood. "I reckon you-all may's well make up your minds to christen this byeh suburban spot Camp-for-the-Night. You won't be gents no further—not just 't present. Putting this old wagon through them desert roads back yonder has just naturally broke the heart of that engine!"

"What, precisely, is the trouble?" Alan Law inquired, rousing from anxious preoccupation.

"Plumb bust' all to hell," the chauffeur explained tersely.
"Nothing could be fairer more exact and comprehensive than that," from Barcus commented.

Law nodded a tad too weary to respond to the o's humor. His worried eyes reviewed the scene of the breakdown.

"What's to be done?" Mr. Law wondered aloud.

"Take it calm," the affable chauffeur advised. "Frettin' won't get you-all nothin'. If it was me, I'd call it a day, make a fire, get them cushions out of the car, and get some rest. You can't do nothin' till I get back, anyway, and that won't be much before sunup."

"Where are you going?" Barcus demanded.

"Walkin', friend, just walkin'—"

"What for?"

"To fetch help—leastways, unless you've got some kick comin' and 'ud rather stop here permanent—"

He turned off and bustled himself with preparations against his journey. "It's simply things like this make me believe this isn't, after all, nothin' more nor less than a long-drawn-out nightmare," Barcus observed pensively.

But Mr. Law was no more attending; he had turned away and was just then standing by the running-board of the motor car and civilly explaining to Miss Judith Trine the purpose of the chauffeur's expedition.

Discovery of this circumstance worked a deep wrinkle between the brows as well as into the humor of Mr. Barcus.

Here, he promised himself, was a situation to titillate the Comic Muse itself. He pointed out in turn the several component parts: the motor car stranded in the hollow of those awful mud-slick hills—for all the world like a mouse petrified with fright at finding itself in the midst of a herd of elephants; in the car, that aged monomaniac, Mr. Seneca Trine, author of all their woes and misadventures, gnashing his teeth in impotent rage to find himself in close juxtaposition to and helpless to injure the man for whose life he lusted with an insatiable passion, the latter standing outside the car, in polite conversation with Mr. Trine's seditious Judith—talking to her in the friendliest fashion imaginable, precisely as if she had not and to seek to advantage himself of them.

His head craned out horribly on his long, wasted neck as he pitched a silent whisper for her ears, and his face in the moonlight seemed to glow with the reflection of that inferno which smoldered in his evil bosom.

But one was silenced, the other quenching all in a twinkling. His daughter turned on him in a flash of imperious rage.

Barcus caught snatches of the woman's tirade.

"Be silent!" he heard her say. "Be silent, do you hear? Don't ever speak to me again unless you want me to replace that gag. I say, don't speak to me!"

I am finished with you once and for all time, never again shall you pervert my nature to your damnable purposes—never again shall word or wish of yours drive me to lift my hand against a man who has never done you the least harm, though your persecution of him would have acquitted him of a charge of manslaughter in any court—on grounds of self-defense!

Understand me!" she raged. "I'm through. Henceforth I go my way, and you yours."

Her voice broke. She clenched her hands into two tight fists with the effort at self-control, and lifted a written face to the moonlight.

"God help us both!" she cried.

CHAPTER XLIV.

As in a Glass, Darkly.
Thoughtfully Mr. Barcus returned his attention to the lovers.

If the evidence of his senses did not mislead him, he was witnessing their first difference of opinion. It was not an argument acute enough to deserve the name of quarrel, but undoubtedly the two were at odds upon some question—Rose insistent, Alan reluctant.

The last gave way in the end, shrugged, returned to the car.

"I'm going back up the trail," he announced, and hesitated oddly.

"Feeling the need of some little exercise, no doubt," Barcus suggested.

"Rose thinks it's dangerous to stop here."

Alan began to explain, ignoring the interruption.

"Miss Rose is right—eh, Miss Judith?" Barcus interpolated.

Judith nodded darkly.

"So I'm going to see if I can't buy burros from the prospector back there."

Rose says he has some—doesn't know how many—"

"Three will be enough," Judith interposed. "I mean, don't get one for me I'm stopping here."

"But—" Alan started to protest.

She gave him pause with a weary gesture.

"Please! It's no good arguing, Mr. Law. I've made up my mind; I can be most helpful here, by my father's side," she asserted, and nodded at Trine with a significant smile that maddened him. "He needs me—and no harm can come to me; I'm pretty well able to take care of myself!"

At this the innocent bystander breathed an unheard-of fervent little prayer of thanksgiving, whose spirit he doubted not was shared by Alan.

For it stuck in the memory of Barcus that their friend, the prospector (whose shack had sheltered Rose and Barcus after their transit of the desert, and prior to the man-made avalanche, which had afforded this temporary immunity from pursuit) had mentioned in the hearing of Rose the fact that his string of burros was limited to three.

This, then, must have been the nub of the lovers' quarrel. Rose's insistent that Judith be left behind, Alan's reluctance to consent to this last he convict himself of the charge of rank ingratitude, remembering the great service his erstwhile antagonist had done him.

If only Judith might not find cause to change her mind!

He set himself sedulously to divert Judith with the magic of his conversational powers—an offering indifferent, if received. He was still blithely gossiping when Judith lunged away to her sister's side.

The ensuing quarrel seemed but the more portentous in view of the restraint imposed upon themselves by both parties thereto.

He believed however that a crisis impended when the tinkle of mule bells sounded down the canyon road, and at this he threw discretion to the winds and ran toward the two with

Society

A farewell party was held in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Twigg on Park street Monday evening. They will make their future home in Philadelphia where Mr. Twigg has accepted a better position with Lauderbach Barber Co., of that place.

A delightful evening was spent playing games and elegant music was rendered by Mrs. Myra Shaw and Weaver's.

These present were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Powell Mr. and Mrs. Scott McKelvey and daughter Lucille. Mr. and Mrs. Jack Wells and children Genevieve, Byron and Robert. Mr. and Mrs. Homer McDowell Mr. and Mrs. William Hoover, Mr. and Mrs. James McLaughlin Mr. and Mrs. Ira Shaw, Mr. Wm. Daugherty, Mrs. Alex. Ben.

Mr. and Mrs. Myra Shaw, Bessie Frump and Eva Baum. Messrs. Lloyd Shaw, James Young and Wm. Powell.

Delicious refreshments were served after which the guests reluctantly departed to their homes. Although we are sorry to lose Mr. and Mrs. Twigg from our society, we all wish them prosperity in their new home.

PENNSYLVANIA FARMERS HAD BIG HARVEST THIS YEAR

Washington, D. C., Nov. 3.—Pennsylvania farmers produced 4,083,000 bushels of grain or cultivated hay in 1914, according to the preliminary estimate made today by the United States Department of Agriculture.

The yield last year was 4,146,000 bushels. The product is selling for an average of $14.40 per ton compared with $13.70 per ton in 1913. The yield per acre this season is 1.30 tons and the quality is one per cent better than the average crop for the past ten years.

The remainder of that business was transacted rapidly enough. There were no preparations to be made, once Alan had ridden up with his three burros, nothing remained but to mount and make off without delay.

Before morning they were all riding like so many hypnotized subjects, fatigue bearing so heavily on all their senses that none spoke or cared to speak.

Broad daylight surprised them in this state, still stubbornly traveling, and shortly afterward showed them one place so perilous that it shocked them temporarily awake.

This was simply a spot where the trail came abruptly to an end on one side of a cleft in the hills quite thirty feet wide and several hundred in depth, and was continued on the far side, the chasm being spanned by a bridge of the simplest character—no more than a footway of board bound together with ropes none to substantia in seeming, with another rope, breast-high, to serve as a hand-rail.

Alan tested the bridge cautiously. It bore him. He returned, helped Rose to cross, and with her once safely landed on the other side, took his life in his hands and, aided by a Barcus unaffectedly afflicted with qualms somehow or other (neither of them knew precisely how) persuaded the burros to cross.

After that, though the way grew more broad and easy and even showed symptoms of a decline, they had not enough strength left to sustain through another hour.

And what they thought good for time, opportunely at this pass, brought them to a clearing dotted with the buildings of an abandoned copper mine. Not a soul was in evidence there, but the rude structures offered shelter for beast as well as man.

Barely had they made Rose as comfortable as might be upon the rough plank flooring of one of the sheds when Alan collapsed as if drugged while Barcus, who had elected himself to keep the first watch and purposed doing it in a sitting position, with his back against the doorjamb, fell sleep overcoming him like a dense dark cloud.

RAILROAD

PENNSY FINDS SLUMP IN FREIGHT TRAFFIC

One of the greatest slumps in freight traffic over the Pennsy's Mid division occurred during the month of October, 1914 according to figures taken from the local records of the company. An unusually noticeable decrease was emphasized when a comparison of the total movement for the preceding month was made.

During the past month the Pennsy handled 150,144 cars over the division, with an average of 5,161 per day. Of the total movement, 94,962 cars were loaded. Of the number of loaded cars, 21,978 were hauled westward and 72,978 were transported eastward.

In October, 1913, the Pennsy's car movement on the division was 188,776 cars or an increase of 21,024 cars over October 1914. In September 1914 the loaded movement over the division totaled 97,687, which is an increase of 8,890 cars over the month ended at 12 o'clock Saturday night.

Increased Production Asked From Farmers

F. R. Stevens, agriculturist of the Lehigh Valley railroad, is calling on farmers along his road to increase their acreage and the efficiency of their farms now that one of the effects of the war in Europe will be a reduction in the world's food supply.

"This is a situation which must be met," says Mr. Stevens in a letter to the farmers "and met by American farmers. In another year all Europe will look to the United States for food. To meet the increased demand all farmers must increase their production."

New Station Opened.

A few minutes after midnight Saturday Katy passenger train No. 26 from the south pulled into the new Union station and Kansas City began the use of the third largest railway terminal. The Pennsylvania terminal at New York and the Union station at Glasgow, Scotland, are larger.

Fifty million dollars has been spent for terminal facilities here by the twelve railroads owning the new station. And it contains every convenience for the traveling public.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grand mother's treatment, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the old and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time, by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft luster and appearance which is so attractive, besides, prevents dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair.

Ellen little short of compassing his death, not once, but half a dozen times; Judith herself poised on the running-board and smiling down at her victim with a warmth patently even more than the warmth of friendship; and at some little distance Rose, Mr. Law's dancie and Judith's sister, sitting her heart out with jealousy of this new-sprung intimacy between her sister and her lover.

"Bad business my friend," Barcus mentally apostrophized the unwitting Alan Law.

He interrupted himself to roll knowingly and with protuberant conviction. "I knew it. Now I begin again."

For Rose had abruptly risen a hair in the affair a gesture of exasperation, prefacing her call. Alan.

To her Mr. Law turned a look with such alacrity that one who watched might doubt whether the woman came first in his eyes.

Nor was this wasted upon the under standing of Judith. Ever as her air rowly though furtively, Mr. Law's own her handsome face darkened ominously.

And her father was as quick to recognize these portents of trouble

Thinking that someone had taken it he was about to report it to the police when it finally came to his memory that he had hired it to a boy from Stoneville to meet the 2:57 train at Woodland and drive the Stoneville school teacher over.

Mrs. Frank Stone will give her many friends a party on November 8th.

Willie Long was seen driving around last Saturday with his new motor.

John Brown had business in Clearfield Saturday.

Andrew Hoover is able to be around again, having been in the Clearfield hospital on account of eye trouble.

Miss Viola Hess is living with Mrs.

John Olson, of Dimeling.

Lloyd P. Stone was seen going to work John Stone's the other evening with a book under his arm. He must be taking some special night study.

George Litz has gone to Rockton, where he will spend a few days hunting.

Clearfield, R. F. D. No. 2.

J. A. Johnston, proprietor of Goodview farm, has some sand, or potatoes on his land, a weed that is not very prevalent in this climate; indeed, those on Mr. Johnston's farm are the only ones we have ever seen around here but further south, especially in Maryland and Virginia, they are a pest. The nettles are very poisonous and make bad sores if gotten in the hands. Mr. Johnston is contemplating sending some to State college to find out how to get rid of them. Has any one any experience with them?

Dr. Owens has just finished husking his corn and has a fine lot of good hard A No. 1 corn; also fine fodder as he had it while the cobs were still green.

Ed Merrifield is busy digging his potatoes. He has a fine crop, but the weeds grow up so thickly after he has cultivated that his brothers, John and Ed, are helping him.

John Butler has just finished digging his potatoes. We have spoken of the quality of these tubers before, but we want to say again that they are as fine a lot of potatoes as ever grew.

Sam Delbert is building a stable. D. W. Anderson must contemplate doing some farming out at his mines as he is clearing and plowing the hillside nearby.

PERSONAL

November 3, 1914

Mrs. Paul Stauffer entertained at cards last evening.

John Barratt is getting along nicely at the hospital.

Thomas Lynch, of Galeton, is the guest of relatives in town.

Mr. and Mrs. Barnes, of Galeton, are the guests of Mrs. Wallace Morrow.

David Dean, of Luthersburg, visited his sister, Mrs. Mai LaBarre, yesterday.

Miss Gertrude McLaughlin, of DuBois, has entered the Clearfield hospital nurses' training school.

Ed Wilhelm and sister, Miss Bell, of Williamsport, who were visiting relatives here have returned to their home.

Mrs. W. E. Phillips entertained members of the L. E. C. club and friends at her home on Fourth street last evening.

Hazel Kramer, who was operated upon for appendicitis at the hospital last week, was moved to her home yesterday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Herb Albert, of DuBois, motored to Clearfield Sunday and spent the day at D. C. Burkett's on Locust street.

D. C. Burkett, who with George Dewalt, is autoing to Florida, writes that they are enjoying every mile of the trip. The roads have been good and the weather favorable.

lucky enough to dig up some raw potatoes, which comforted us a little.

"A great battle was announced for today, September 9. We have been in the trenches four days now and the rest after long marches would be agreeable if there were no dead bodies of men and horses, and if the flies didn't pester us terribly.

"The great battle did not come off, but today, September 10, we could see, half a mile off, the French artillery, strongly entrenched. They say strong forces of the enemy are in front of us, but that we need fear nothing. A heavy battle is going on on our right wing. It seems that the French army is in a bad position; to get out it must retire on Paris or break through our lines.

"At 2 o'clock today, September 11, we were ordered to leave the trenches. We thought it would be to attack the enemy, but it seems we are to go back. Two French army corps have pierced our lines. Away we went, without taking time to eat, through destroyed villages, where there is nothing to pick up. We had nothing to eat until 10 o'clock, just a morsel, and then went on until 8 o'clock in the morning.

Only One Meal in Days
"Today, September 12, we had a little bread with coffee. We are suffering terribly from privation and exhaustion. They tell us we are executing a turning movement, not a retreat. To us it looks like flight. Finally we arrived at Souain, where we hoped to eat, but instead of rations they gave us shovels with which to dig trenches, in the pouring rain. While we were at it French sharpshooters drove us back with the trenches uncompleted. The entire force was obliged to retire.

"Today, September 14, we have dug ourselves in again and remain, stuck against man, all day in our trenches. We have eaten nothing all day; we suffer atrociously from hunger and thirst; the rain comes down in torrents, but we can't leave the trenches because of the shower of shrapnel from the enemy's guns. Finally, this afternoon, we had our first repast for several days, consisting of rice with a little meat and bread and a morsel of bacon. It was like a drop of water on a hot iron.

"The French have occupied the trenches we left at Souain, three miles back. Behind us is Somme, a ruins, occupied by our troops. To-day the French artillery gave us a little respite, but toward 6:30 o'clock it reopened the hellish fire, which continued very late in the night, at the rate of a shot every 10 minutes, just sufficient to leave us no repose. It is a dog's life we are leading and we shall soon be sick—every man.

Dies Victim of Hunger
"Today, September 23, we were ordered into the first line of trenches, having before us a battalion of the One Hundred and Sixty-first, which has suffered great losses. Toward 1, the artillery opened a violent fire, and the shell supply rained upon our lines. We were obliged to keep close to our trenches, unable to leave them for anything. We are all nearly famished.

"Today, September 30, the devilish French guns have swept off half of our company; their fire is so constant that we have not time to fix ourselves. We are still confined to the trenches, and it is two days since we were served meagre rations of rice and coffee made with rain water. The cold north winds have followed the rain and added to our suffering. Many of the men are so cramped with rheumatism that we are obliged to lift them out of the trenches.

"Today, October 4, we have eaten again and the rations were more generous; but it seems impossible for us to satisfy our hunger.
"This morning, October 8, happily it does not rain, but the temperature blows from the north and makes us feel our hunger all the more. They say there are plenty of provisions in the rear; the question is to get them to us in face of the French artillery which sweeps the ground constantly and makes life impossible except under cover of the trenches. Hunger is terrible. I suffer horribly from the cold also. I am no longer able to keep up. I don't think I can last much longer."

OBITUARY

Margaret, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Strayer, died at 5:15 Friday morning at her parents' home on Fifth street. She has been sick for ten days with pneumonia. She is survived by her mother and father, five brothers, William, Leo, Walter, Edward and John, and one sister, Jessie.
